Saxon Street Proposals

Saxon Street is a key part of our plans to better connect the town centre of Bletchley to its railway station. Our proposals will not only improve connectivity between the town centre and railway station, but also relocate Bletchley bus station closer to Queensway, creating an area where people can more easily connect their bus and rail journeys and travel, whether locally or nationally. Through these interventions, we can create a real sense of arrival in a reinvigorated Central Bletchley.

This will be particularly important next year as Bletchley becomes even better connected nationally when direct journeys to Oxford and Cambridge (likely by 2030) become possible through East-West Rail.

During the design process, the city council explored various options to improve Saxon Street's traffic flow and pedestrian connectivity. The design in this consultation balances these needs without significantly affecting travel time through the centre.

Saxon Street Objectives

In planning for improvements to Saxon Street, the city council has set out the following objectives:

- To provide a transport system that makes it easier to get around, including by bus and train, that also complements the East-West Rail proposals at Bletchley railway station and supports sustainable travel choices.
- To ensure a safer, healthier and more accessible transport network for all, including high-quality provision for those with mobility impairments.
- To help the businesses located in Central Bletchley, particularly in Queensway, by providing better connections to new customers.
- Improve the attractiveness of Bletchley town centre as a place for new employment and for business to invest and locate.
- To narrow the road carriageway in certain areas to safely accommodate vehicular movements and pedestrian flows.
