You might have already had a friendly visit from us when we asked you a few questions and told you about this new housing project—big thanks to everyone for their time!

We are beginning to work up options to provide new homes, modern supported housing for existing residents, new facilities, and public spaces. To help us get the ball rolling, we have held two public consultations at Paddington Arts Centre, and the feedback has been positive and will guide us through our early designs. People shared views on open spaces, accessibility, and parking.

Using this feedback, the design team (architects hired by the Council) has created a set of really early drawings, which we will show residents in July.

If you haven't had your say yet, you can do so right now by:
